

GORDON, ALEXANDER

Alexander (Sandy) Gordon was born in Stonehaven, Scotland in 1895. When Alexander was 16 years old, in 1911, he was summoned by Randolph Bruce to help with the construction, of what is today, Pynelogs Cultural Centre. When the First World War broke out, he lied about his age to be able to serve. He served with the 72nd Seaforth Highlanders overseas in France. Near the end of the war he was discharged after being shot. Upon his return to Canada, he was hired by the federal government to work as a foreman for the development of the Radium Hot Springs pools. Upon completion in 1923 he was running the operation.
